Corinne-"The Pirates of Penzance "-Juvenile Opera-Salvini.

Corinne had an increased audience at the National Theatre last night, and her piquant and artistic acting and singing won the hearts of her hearers. The company came in for a good indorsement, and the "Magic Slipper" may be said to be a success. The whole stage mangement of the company is under the control of Miss Jennie Kimball, the mother of little Corinne, whose large experience and musical knowledge fully qualify her for the task. The completeness of the performance shows the result of her skillful man-FORD'S OPERA-HOUSE.

The Miles Juvenile Opera Troupe gave two performances at Ford's Opera-House yesterday-"The Little Duke" in the afternoon, and "The Chimes of Normandy" at night. such an extended run in New York, will be prosing the part of Arabella, and two complete performances may be anticipated. "THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE."

Last night the first representation of this popular opera by the juveniles was given at Lincoln Hall by the children composing Professor George Sheldon's Juvenile Opera Company. The hall was well filled, and the frequent demonstrations of applause showed how greatly the audience was satisied. The opera was finely placed upon the stage, the costumes, scenery, and appointments being bright, fresh, and appropriate. The little ones appeared to enter fully into the spirit of the opera, and sang and acted charmingly. The principals were Annie Lewis, as Mabel: Lillie Lewis, as Ruth; Cleone Daniels, as Frederic; Harry O. Noyes, as the Pirate King; Wilbur Sharpe, as the Police Sergeant, and Eddie Thornton and Charles O'Connor, who both had a chance at General Stanley. Among the chorus perhaps the most noticeable was a charming little midget, Bessie O'Brien, whose diminutive size and tender age—she being only five years old-as well as her sprightly movements and evident enjoyment of the situation, attracted no little attention. The "Pirates" will be repeated to-night.

The engagement of the greatest actor known to the living stage by Manager Ford is an event of more than mere passing interest. Salvini is the incarnation of passionate classic tragedy in its very highest and best methods-a great genius and an artist of surpassing grandeur. The announcement of his second engagement in Boston was the signal of such a demand for seats that all were sold for Monday night on the first day of the sale. He appears here, with an English-speaking company, on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 3 and 4, as the Gladiator and Othello, which characters are generally esteemed his best. The sale of seats commences next Saturday.

A PROSPECTIVE COLLECTOR.

Who Will Collect Customs in Georgetown When the Dead-Lock Breaks.

The nomination of Mr. J. Henry Wilon, of Georgetown, to be collector of the port of Georgetown, meets with general approval in that ancient nee Washington, it being regarded in all respects a most satisfactory appointment. The inusual merit of the office seeking the man, and not the man the office, is a feature of the nomination, Mr. Wilson not having been an applicant, and knowing nothing whatever about the selection until officially notified that his name had been sent to the Senate for confirmation. Mr. Wilson is a native of the District, having been born, in 1827, in Georgetown, on Bridge street, between Congress and High, and is consequently in his fifty-fourth year. He has been engaged in the merchant tailor business on the same quare for over thirty years. Beginning life with no capital but sail, energy, brains, and integrity, he has won an enviable character as an enterorising, reliable business man, and has accumulated quite a handsome competence. He has been a prominent and active member of the Dunbarton Street Methodist Episcopal Church since his boyhood, and has been the leader of its choir since he was eighteen years old. Mr. Wilson never held a political office and never was an applicant for one. In the present case his name was suggested to President Garfield as a suitable man for the place, and the nomination was sent to the Senate before he was aware of it. In politics he has been an uncompromising Republican since the establishment of the party, being previous to which event an earnest Whig. In person he is above the middle height, well built, with a large head, handsome face, hair slightly turned gray, and is a man of much orce of character and attractiveness of manner. native of the District, and of old Georgetown stock, his father and grandfather both having been born in that city, his appointment is warmly indorsed by the people of the District. Mr Wilson has been a fortunate man both in his business and social relations, having a large and interest-

The plaintiff states that on March 3, 1881, she was a passenger in a car from the Navy-Yard going westward, and when the car arrived at Capitol Hill the driver detached his horses from the car and with them walked down the hill, leaving the conductor inside collecting the fares. SCIENTIFIC TALK.

NATIONAL ACADEMICIANS.

Papers Read Before the Session Yesterday-Mountain Observations-Soil and Diseases-Electric Light Photometry - Pedal Development-Pendulum Work.

The National Academy of Sciences were n session all day yesterday. They met at eleven o'clock, and held a secret session for the transaction of business, the election of new members, &c. After recess for lunch another session was held, beginning at two o'clock. There was quite a large attendance, the number of ladies being especially noticeable. Many of them were young and charming, which is a conclusive evidence that science does not wither all it charms or charm all it withers. There were but few members of the academy present during the session, and so the papers which were read did not give rise to very academy, William B. Rogers, of Boston, presided, and announced the subjects of the papers. MOUNTAIN OBSERVATIONS.

The first paper was entitled "Mountain Observations," and was read by Professor Langly, of the Alleghany Observatory. He said that they had about arrived at a point in solar science where they were met with the difficulty of penetrating the intervening medium which separates the observer from the object of his search. The character of this medium affected all galvanometric observations upon the heat of the atmosphere which surrounds the sun. He had taken a large number of observations, but the result was affected by the temperature at different times. He thought that the only remedy was to carry out Newton's idea and take the observations from some very elevated station, say ten thousand feet, or at an elevation of three, four, and ten thousand feet. The planet seemed to be surrounded by dusty streams. The whole science of solar physics depended upon the character of the elevated station. At an elevated station it will be possible to determine in two or three days what would otherwise require several years. He spoke of experiments in pursuance of this theory being conducted during the coming year in connection with the Signal Service. THE SOIL AND DISEASES.

The next paper, on "The Rates of Flow of Water and the Capacity of Soil to Filter," was read by R. Pumpelly, and was an interesting account of the relation of geology to sanitary science. The main portions of the paper have been published by the National Board of Health. He said that the great interest in sanitary science had lead to a very thorough examination of the connection between the lower forms of animal life and epidemic diseases. This form of life was bred in the corrupt masses of cesspools, vaults, and cemeteries, and then communicated to the soil. A series of experiments had been carried on to ascertain the capacity of different kinds of soil as filters. It was ascertained that sand afforded no protection against the transmission of disease. In houses built on a sandy soil, and even when the cellar was above the ground level, there was danger of contamination from foul places, The experiments that had been made were illustrated by charts showing the methods adopted to test the filtering capacity of the different variety of soils. Upon the conclusion of the reading of the paper a member suggested that in Paris the leakage from the gas-pipes and the dissemination of the gaseous products through the soil was considered an effective agent for destroying the germ of disease. PROFESSOR LOOMIS' PAPER.

In the absence of Professor Elias Loomis, Professor Abbe read his paper on the "Reduction to Sea-Level of Barometric Observations Made at Elevated Stations." The object of the paper was This decidedly amusing opera, which has had to show the cause for the deviations between the observations at higher and lower stations from the duced at Ford's Opera-House on Saturday at the | formula of Laplace. The secret of the change lies matinee and on Saturday night, and not Friday in the defective assumption that the temperature night, as heretofore published. Mr. Ford's opera | is the same at the top and bottom of the mountain. company will be reinforced by the addition of our | The reduction of barometric levels to the sea-level own popular vocalist, Miss Eva Mills, who will depends largely upon local circumstances. At Mount Washington the deficiency in Laplace's formula is eighty-six per cent., even when the temperature remains the same. A very interesting paper was read on

"ELECTRIC LIGHT PHOTOMETRY" by Professor George F. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania. He said that there was a wide difference in the methods employed in ascertaining the power of the electric light. The results reached by the manufacture of the various machines are discordant. In scientific papers the maximum value is from 1,200 to 1,500 candles to the horse-power. The prospectus of the manufacturing companies gives from 1,500 to 2,000 candles to the horse-power. Everybody admits that the minimum is too small and the maximum too large. How to ascertain the proper power is the question. The theoretical maximum is 2.500 candles to the horse power. This gives to the machine an efficiency of 100 per cent. Such a result is impossible, as there is a loss quite equal to fifty per cent. The mean value for 1,200 to 1,500 candles can be accepted as about right. In electric lights the amount of light given out from all directions is just the same. Hence the difficulty in getting the power of the light. The speaker suggested as a remedy that the light be measured while the carbons are revolving, which will give the mean of the intensity of light in all directions. Professor Barker also read a paper on "The Condenser

Method of Measuring High Tension Current." PEDAL DEVELOPMENT. The next paper was read by Professor E. D. Cope, of Philadelphia, on "The Relations Between Strains and Impacts, and the Structure of the Feet of Mammalia." The aim of the paper was to show that the development of the number of the lower limbs of animals was due to the ground upon which they walked. The soft ground spreads out the toes and leads to their separate development, while hard ground develops the middle toe at the expense of the others. The same principle applies to the development of the bones in the lower portion of the extremities. The paper was illustrated by drawings on the blackboard. The last

"THE PROGRESS OF PENDULUM WORK," was read by Professor C. S. Pierce, of Boston. The academy then adjourned until this morning, at eleven o'clock, when a business session will be held, and in the afternoon a public session, when scientific papers will be read. Last evening the members of the academy attended a reception given by Admiral Rodgers, at his residence, near the Naval Observatory.

A Surprised Skatist,

There was a very interesting event at the Skating Rink last night. At the conclusion of the exercises of the Wednesday and Friday circling class Mr. W. H. Mills skated out from the line and approached the manager of the rink, Mr. $378.40.
